Jibbs Warrior comes to Next Dimension Wrestling shrouded in mystery. He was a surprise entrant in the 2134 Gary Atkinson Memorial Tournament and did surprisingly well. Jibbs Warrior is an all around great athlete, possessing both great strength and agility. He also possesses a childlike innocence when you get to know him.

Jibbs Warrior has a fascination with trains, which has caused him to name some of his most powerful moves after them. Jibbs Warrior also showcases a high-impact wrestling style. A ringside reporter once said, "It looks like a tornado came through here!" after one of Jibbs Warrior's matches. After that, Jibbs Warrior began using the TORNADO DDT as his finishing move to great results.

Later in 2134, Jibbs Warrior started to team-up with Battle Axe, filling in for an injured Broadsword. Also, at the beginning of 2135, Jibbs Warrior formed a tag-team with NDW newcomer, Rob Craig, named The Craig Legacy. Rob Craig claims to be Jibbs Warrior's father, which has many people baffled as they are both relatively the same age. Perhaps there is some sort of time travel involved for one or both of these men.
